D.J. is a leading restructuring lawyer in national and cross-border / multi-jurisdictional matters. She is known for her deep knowledge of the domestic and international insolvency frameworks and has built a reputation for applying strategic skills to achieve precedent-setting outcomes for her clients.

D.J. is considered “go-to” counsel for clients requiring creative advice both within, and outside of, formal insolvency proceedings. She has appeared as counsel at all levels of Court in Canada on behalf of clients, and regularly works with lenders, companies experiencing financial distress or their stakeholders, landlords and court-appointed monitors and receivers. She is often retained by lawyers, financial advisors and stakeholders from other jurisdictions who request advice in connection with Canadian insolvency and cross-border matters.

D.J. is consistently recognized as a leading practitioner in insolvency litigation and financial restructuring. In particular, she has been recognized by Chambers Canada and Chambers Global where she is described by interviewees as “extremely strategic”. She has been named Insolvency Litigator of the Year four times by Benchmark Canada Litigation, appeared multiple times in the Top 50 Women Litigators in Canada and is listed in various ranking publications, including Who’s Who Legal, Best Lawyers in Canada and Lexpert. In 2023, D.J. was the recipient of IWIRC’s global recognition as Woman of the Year in Restructuring.

Passionate about the advancement of the practice of insolvency law, D.J. has been actively involved with multiple professional organizations throughout her career, including serving on various boards and executive committees. D.J. has also developed course materials and served as guest lecturer on insolvency law at several law schools in Ontario. She regularly speaks at conferences and is the author of papers on various issues affecting her clients.
